University of Alaska Education and Training Programs for Health, FY14

The University of Alaska is committed to preparing today's students for tomorrow, recognizing that tomorrow's careers require advanced skills, greater knowledge and more flexibility than ever before. Specific to the health industry, the University offers vocational and technical training as well as advanced degrees. This inventory provides the locations of programs and degrees or certificates offered in FY14, which includes three terms: summer 2013, fall 2013 and spring 2014.

The University of Alaska is unique in its offerings of education and training programs to assist in building a skilled workforce for the health industry:

- Core programs include vocational and technical training directly related to the health industry.
 - 18 Occupational Endorsements, 26 Certificates, 46 Associate Degrees, 20 Bachelor Degrees, 8 Graduate Certificates, 5 Master Degrees, and 2 Doctorates
 - 3118 graduates between 2009-2013 resulting in 2,258 graduates being employed in the health industry within their graduate year, and earning an average of $45,885 within 5 years
- Support programs include the broader vocational and technical training and advanced degrees in such fields as education, office technology, biology, and rural development and so on.
 - 16 Occupational Endorsements, 22 Certificates, 30 Associate Degrees, 72 Bachelor Degrees, 4 Licensures, 1 Post Baccalaureate Certificate, 2 Graduate Certificates, 20 Master Degrees, and 3 Doctorates
 - Information on these programs can be located at: <http://www.alaska.edu/research/wp/ua/>
- Approximately 42% of the health core and support degree programs can be completed at least partially via e-Learning.
- The University has specialized capacities such as the Alaska Center for Rural Health and the Institute for Circumpolar Health Studies in Anchorage.
